Subject: Emergency Appeal for Immediate Global Action Against Escalating Atrocities in Iran

Dear Ms Moscogiuri

We write with utmost urgency and alarm regarding the rapidly escalating campaign of executions, arbitrary detention, torture, disappearances, and systematic political repression being carried out by the Islamic Republic in Iran.

Iran is witnessing a severe intensification of state terror. Across the country, countless citizens, many of them young people, are being imprisoned on fabricated charges, denied legal representation, subjected to sham trials, and punished for nothing more than speaking against tyranny, expressing dissent, or demanding basic freedoms. Families are being terrorised, communities silenced, and an entire generation is living under fear.

Since the recent war, the regime has dramatically tightened its grip over society. Roadblocks have reportedly been established across major routes and urban areas, security checks have increased at street corners, citizens are being stopped and searched, mobile phones inspected, and private communications scrutinised. This resembles a nation under siege by its own rulers.

Reports indicate that when mobile phones are searched, any messages, photographs, comments, or digital content relating to the war, expressing criticism of the regime, or perceived sympathy toward the United States may be treated as evidence of treason or collaboration with an enemy. Individuals can then face detention, disappearance, severe punishment, or even execution following sham proceedings devoid of due process.

Those found to be critical of the government also risk confiscation of their homes, businesses, savings, vehicles, and personal belongings. Collective punishment through seizure of assets is being used to intimidate families, impoverish dissenters, and silence wider society.

The regime has also imposed severe internet restrictions for more than forty two days, cutting people off from communication, access to information, and contact with the outside world. Such collective digital repression is itself a grave violation of the rights of the Iranian people. It also serves another sinister purpose, to conceal abuses, silence witnesses, and kill in darkness without the world hearing the cries of victims.

Recent reports indicate a sharp rise in executions, mass arrests, politically motivated prosecutions, and intimidation campaigns. Individuals are being targeted for possessing messages, photographs, online content, or opinions critical of the regime. This is not law enforcement, it is organised persecution and collective punishment.

At this moment, silence is dangerous, caution is costly, and delay can be fatal.

We therefore call upon Amnesty International to use every available platform, resource, and mechanism to confront these atrocities with the highest level of urgency.

We urge immediate action:

1. Launch an emergency international campaign focused exclusively on the current wave of executions, arrests, internet blackouts, confiscations, and repression in Iran.
2. Publicly and forcefully condemn the regime's use of executions, torture, hostage taking, sham trials, collective intimidation, digital censorship, and seizure of private property.
3. Mobilise global media networks to bring these crimes into mainstream headlines daily, until the world can no longer ignore them.
4. Demand immediate restoration of unrestricted internet access and communications for the Iranian people.
5. Demand immediate access for independent monitors, investigators, and United Nations human rights bodies.
6. Intensify documentation of arrests, disappearances, prison abuse, phone searches, confiscation of assets, roadblock harassment, internet shutdowns, and extrajudicial violence.
7. Press democratic governments to impose real consequences on officials and institutions responsible for these crimes.
8. Amplify the voices of prisoners' families, bereaved parents, activists, and witnesses whose lives are at risk.
9. Build sustained international pressure so these abuses remain a global priority rather than a passing headline.
10. Prepare the evidential basis for future prosecutions of those responsible for crimes against the Iranian people.

The world has seen this pattern before. When authoritarian regimes believe nobody is watching, repression escalates, prisons fill, executions multiply, and innocent blood is spilled without restraint.

The people of Iran are not asking for sympathy alone. They are asking for visibility, solidarity, pressure, and action. They are asking the international community not to abandon them while they are hunted by their own government, stripped of their property, and silenced behind digital walls.

If leading human rights institutions do not respond with full force now, many more lives may be lost in the shadows.

We urge Amnesty International to rise to this moment with courage, relentless determination, and uncompromising moral leadership.

Yours sincerely,

Dr Nazak Tavakoli
